Suggested activities

Icebreaker activities and discussion

- Explain to the class that today they are going to understand more about their own personality traits and how this knowledge can be used to help in future decisions e.g. what subjects to take at school and what careers they may be good at
- First discuss what preferences are – use examples that everyone can try – folding arms one way but not the other, signing your name with one hand and then the other, throwing/catching a ball with opposite hands. Explain that there is no right and no wrong – we all have our own preferences
- Explain the purpose of doing the quiz – go through PowerPoint slides explaining the personality preferences

Animal me quiz

- Pupils complete Animal me quiz online at myworldofwork.co.uk/ican and print out or save their results
- Refer to the slides to show all the animal types

Animal me 2

Discussion about the results

- As each person is different, discuss how it is helpful to know what your own natural strengths are and how this can contribute to better team work i.e. know when to try and balance your strengths to get a task done
- Teacher to discuss their own personality/ animal type and then ask the pupils to share their own. Are people with the same traits similar?
- Discuss how it can be difficult at times to work with opposite traits eg Eddy (extrovert) or Ian (introvert). Discuss how these difficulties can be overcome
- Discuss how every type is needed in a good team and by understanding each other's differences we get better results

Research suggested jobs on My World of Work

- Using My World of Work on a screen, the teacher explores his/her job ideas from the quiz using the search function in My career options. Show the class how easy/interesting it is to look at videos of job roles and also to find out what subjects are required
- Either in the class or the ICT suite (can be in groups or individually) pupils to investigate one job from their results. Optional task: pupils can complete the My World of Work worksheet to record findings
- Pupils can volunteer to feedback to the class
- Discuss together whether the required subjects for their suggested jobs reflect their current performance/preference in the classroom
